Safety Center Website Offers New Levels of Security

NORFOLK, Va., May 10, 2017 – Visitors to the Naval Safety Center (NAVSAFECEN) website will notice some improved changes beginning soon requiring a common access card (CAC) to access certain aspects of the command's site.

The new SharePoint site will provide a secure platform where safety professionals can find current and relevant information about the safety community including sensitive information unsuitable for the command's existing public website.

The improved CAC-protected site will require users to establish an account when accessing for the first time. Users can create an account through the host Intelink using easy step-by-step instructions provided. Once established, safety professionals will be able to access a link directly from the NAVSAFECEN's public website. Users without an account or enabled system can still access the existing public website.

Visit <http://www.public.navy.mil/NAVSAFECEN/Pages> to view additional information and be up to date on enhancements as they occur. Follow us on Facebook at <https://www.facebook.com/NavalSafetyCenter/> for additional updates and news.
