The Military Justice Litigation subspecialty (1202) will provide an officer with the following specific capabilities and requirements:

- Criminal procedure:
  - Pre-Trial: The role of law enforcement, proper methods of obtaining evidence and interviewing witnesses, rules and procedures related to convening criminal courts, pre-trial restraint and hearings, preliminary hearings, pre-trial agreements and discovery rules.
  - Trial: The parts of a trial, motions practice, voir dire, pleas, findings and instructions.
  - Post-Trial: Collateral consequences of litigation, the appellate process and clemency.

- Criminal Law: Criminal offenses and defenses and the exercise of prosecutorial discretion including charging decisions like alternative charging and lesser-included offenses.

- Rules of evidence and witness testimony: Laying foundations, introducing real and demonstrative evidence, the use of experts and the rules governing direct examination and cross-examination.

- Principles of sentencing: Use of evidence in aggravation, extenuation and mitigation, forms of punishments and the maximum punishments, proper sentencing arguments, sentencing instructions and voting procedures.

- Due process protections and adverse administrative processes.

- Ethics: Must be able to analyze and apply the principles of ethical decision making, including the standards of professional ethical behavior and exemplary conduct.
Ability to communicate in writing: Research and writing skills which cogently and creatively present a legal position while interweaving theme and theory.

Ability to orally articulate complex ideas to a variety of audiences, and interpret the non-verbal cues exhibited by clients, witnesses, potential members and other counsel, including the ability to use non-verbal communication concepts to evaluate voir dire and testimony.
