SPAWAR Focuses on Navy Information Dominance at AFCEA West 2012 Exhibition

SAN DIEGO – Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command (SPAWAR) will be participating in the largest defense and technology exhibition on the West Coast at the San Diego Convention Center, Jan. 24-26. Co-sponsored by the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association (AFCEA) and the U.S. Naval Institute, AFCEA West 2012 will feature exhibits from 400 technology leaders and discussions by leading military experts.

SPAWAR, the Navy's Information Dominance systems command responsible for delivering command, control, communications, computers and intelligence (C4I) capabilities, networks and information technology systems to the fleet, will host a leadership speaker series at booth 1147 throughout the three day event. The speakers will address various topics including the Navy's data center consolidation initiative, the Consolidated Afloat Networks and Enterprise Services (CANES) program and SPAWAR's role as the Navy's single technical authority for C4I. Please visit <http://www.afcea.org/events/west/12/special.asp#SPAWAR> for a complete schedule of the speakers.

SPAWAR includes the following organizations:

- SPAWAR Headquarters
- SPAWAR Systems Center Pacific
- SPAWAR Systems Center Atlantic
- Program Executive Office for C4I
- Program Executive Office for Enterprise Information Systems
- Program Executive Office for Space Systems
- Joint Program Executive Office Joint Tactical Radio System

"AFCEA West brings together talented people from around the fleet and industry to discuss the way ahead for the Navy's Information Dominance Vision," said Rear Adm. Patrick Brady, SPAWAR commander. "These types of panel discussions and professional engagements encourage the incubation of new ideas and opportunities."
