

Photo of the Week

#574: Hmm, Incoming Call, Could Be an Emergency

Or it could trigger an emergency. Yes, folks, that's the telltale glow of a cellphone screen in this rider's hand. Maybe he figured that since it was night, no one would see that he was being an idiot.

The petty officer who contributed this image explained that traffic was heavy, flowing between 45 mph and 55 mph in a 65 mph zone. The rider was lane-splitting. "He should have turned the brightness down on his screen first...it was a dead giveaway," our contributor wrote. "I guess that would be a bad pun if he never made it home."

Want more?
<< Previous | Next >>

www.public.navy.mil/navsafecen